VETERAN RACE DRIVER KILLED
Indianapolis (UP) — Ralph Hepburn, who had been piloting big race cars almost since the sport began, was killed in a crackup Tuesday while warming up for the 394 500-mile Indianapolis Speedway race.

Hepburn, one of the smallest drivers in the business but as tough as the steel he came, had stepped on the gas as he roared out of the northwest turn at 130 mph.

His Novi Special lurched into a spin and banged into an inside retaining wall. Hepburn was crushed in the cockpit. Although the 35,000 spectators didn't know it at the time, he had become the 39th fatality since the track was built and the first in this year's classic.

Dr. E. Rogers Smith, track doctor, said Hepburn died of a crushed chest and fractured skull. The $50,000 car, owned by Lou Welch of Novi, Mich., was damaged so badly Welch said he would not enter it in the race.

The 52-year-old Hepburn was certain he would win this year. He had set two track records in the many years he had raced at the Speedway, including the 134 mph lap record which still stands. He thought he would have won last year, until he lost his car for leading a driver's revolt.

He was president of the American Society of Professional Automobile Racing when that group had a row with the track. He is survived by his wife, Ida, and 16-year-old daughter, Joanna.
